

Virginia and Carolina in Annual Clash To-Day

MEN WHO WILL WEAR ORANGE AND BLUE

MEN WHO WILL WEAR WHITE AND BLUE

FOOTBALL WARRIORS TUGGING AT LEASHES, WAITING FOR WHISTLE

Virginia and Carolina Ready to Engage in Final Football Struggle of 1913—Crowd Will Be Largest in Years—Experts Agree That Dope All Points to Orange and Blue Victory, but There May Be Upsets.

Virginia and Carolina will meet in their twentieth annual clash on the gridiron at Broad Street Park this afternoon before what promises to be the largest crowd attending this classic of the Southern football world in the past five years at least. Both teams are pronounced fit from each camp, strange to say, come optimistic reports. There is an entire absence of the pessimism usually rampant on the eve of battle. Carolina, confessedly the weaker team, is counting upon the courage of the men wearing the White and Blue to largely offset the heavier Orange and Blue eleven. They are not expecting victory, are those Tarheels; therefore should the season close with another of those upsets for which it has been marked, victory will be all the sweeter.

Virginia's squad arrived last night shortly after 6 o'clock, and the men were hustled to the Country Club, where they freshened up a bit, had supper, and then drove to the Jefferson Hotel. There they will stay until time for the game. Carolina spent the night in Petersburg. The coaches felt that the men needed quiet, and decided that the city on the other side of the Appomattox was just the proper place. The team will arrive early this morning, and, like Virginia, will be at the Jefferson.

Strong From Chapel Hill. Nearly 100 Chapel Hill enthusiasts arrived here last night. The main body will arrive to-day. An excursion train to Norfolk will bring about 1000 students from the semiole city. The majority of Virginia's men are due some time during the forenoon. Charlotte says the advance guard will be practically disengaged. Certain it is that every student at the university will be on hand.

From a local standpoint, the Virginia-Carolina game is always the greatest attraction of the football year, if not only the best opportunity to witness a contest that, regardless of the score, always proves interesting, but it is the meeting of time-honored rivals, unbreathing, noisy, restful, the roar of the thousands in Richmond, not moaning, that they are among the most important significances of the day.

Given a fair day, Richmond's beauty will be seen in all its splendor decking the grounds within the enclosure. So does this occasion to put its stamp of approval on the elected warhorses of the turf. Fair women and well-grounded men add to the attractiveness of the occasion. And what world of color there will be!

Well, the crowd should be great, though it is hard to explain. Legally, on the strength of the two teams' past record, Virginia would be an easy winner. On the other hand, Carolina, with the most formidable array of coaching talent ever assembled in the South, has been preparing for this game in the almost hidden hope that it could better back the attack of the Virginians and certainly make it vastly better showing than that of the team last year.

DO NOT CONSIDER DEFEAT.

Alumni of Chapel Hill are not concerning defeat though they admit that there must be a considerable upswelling of the dope for their favorite to win. They all, to a man, feel that the Virginia team is no equal to a weak team, a team that knows nothing but fight that is full of zip and pep, and will stay until the finish regardless of what the earlier moments may bring forth. That incomparable feeling that the Blue and White always holds something in reserve for Virginia unquestionably has had its influence on the almost phenomenal advance sale of tickets. Practically every reserved seat has been taken and admission tickets have been purchased at the downtown stores in vast quantities. In a few brief hours it will tell how many Carolinas will have met with Virginia in a honorable strife, closing a double decade of triumph. November 1903 has Carolina been able to vanquish his opponent for, nor does it seem probable that this will be accomplished this year. Superstitiously inclined point to the fact that it is 1913 and that the thirteen may have some effect in spilling the beans and throwing the game the way no expert fit to go.

WEET FIELD HELPS TO CAROLINA.

Experts agree that a wet field will help Carolina. Virginia's all season has emphasized an open style of play, forward passing has won many a game, and against this form of attack Ted Pendleton, Wilson, and Blueton that have built up a strong defense, a defense, however, that will be infinitely stronger should the going be heavy and the fast and powerful backs of the Orange and Blue impeded by their tactics. With a hard underfooting there is no question but that Blue Warriors will have the advantage. The combination of weight and speed will be hard for the lighter Carolinas to effect even with their perfect training.

Another point that domestics are bringing forward is the fact that while Virginia's team averages 10 years in experience, Carolina has just three men who have had previous knowledge of "varsity" football. The question of substitutes has not been overlooked. Here too, Virginia has the bulge.

Carolina is woefully weak in men to rated holes should unfortunate injuries occur. The right back position, the galling wound in the side of Carolina's football hopes all season is still the rock placed. However, these are the things to especially watch.

CARE LITTLE FOR EXPERTS.

We who leave the sport of the game, who throng when strong men most strong men, will not care one whit for the experts' opinion; we'll just go out and have a good time and yell again according as our fancy dictates. It will be Thanksgiving Day, the day when our sister State to the South journeys

Washington and Lee Arrives Early—A. & M. Rests in Suffolk.

BY A. R. W. MACKRETH

Norfolk, Va., November 26.—All Southwest Virginia is turning its sporting attention to Norfolk, where tomorrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the most interesting football classic of the Virginia inter-collegiate season will be fought out on the Fair Ground gridiron, where the Virginia Military Institute meets the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. The event will be one of the most brilliant in the history of football in Roanoke. Many features arranged in connection with the game will add interest aside from the test of muscle and nerve, and when the referee's whistle blows to-morrow afternoon it is believed one of the longest and most exciting football games ever seen in the near border city when Washington and Lee and Director Teusner of the C. C. A. are engaged to show what so many men not members of the association are to take part.

The ten handsome silver and bronze medals, presented by the Church Hill Bank, will be given to the men as soon as the tenth man finishes. President Parrish, of the bank, will make the presentation speech in front of the grandstand.

The public is invited to come to the association field and see the start and finish of the race. No charge will be made, and no ticket will be taken. It is to be a free-for-all merrymaking crowd out to cheer the best man.

Twenty-four men will start. All are expected to run. There is a silly one in fact, however, that a mile of the race will be run.

There was little room for them, and there was a scramble for quarters. As every other hotel and lodging-house in Norfolk was filled, the Lexington men

C. C. A. INAUGURATES ANNUAL CROSS-COUNTRY EVENT FOR CHURCH HILL MEN AND BOYS.

The first annual Church Hill cross-country run of the Church Civic Association was from the C. C. A. Clubhouse at 10 o'clock this morning. The run is in the interest of the men and boys of Church Hill, and only one of the association's long distance runners will be in the squad which faces the starters' gun. The run was arranged for the men and boys of Church Hill, and Director Teusner of the C. C. A. is delighted to know that so many men not members of the association are to take part.

PORTSMOUTH NOT TO DROP OUT OF LEAGUE; OLD OFFICERS NAMED

Virginia League Magnates Hold Peaceable Meeting in Newport News—Announcement That New Company Would Take Over Trucker Franchise—Richmond's Ten-Cent Gate Causes Greatest Discussion.

WHAT VIRGINIA LEAGUE MAGNATES DID

Re-elected all old officers. Announced that there would be no change in the circuit for 1914. Decided to curtail the season by one week, opening April 16 and closing September 9. Reduced the number of 10-cent seats in the Richmond park. Decided that all parks must be equipped with registering turnstiles. Resolved to increase either player or salary limit. Secretary also made treasurer of league. Changed annual meeting date from November to October.

Newport News, Va., November 26.—That there would be change in neither circuit or officials for the coming season was the decision to-day of the directors of the Virginia League, the league having no money to pay for seats in the grandstand.

The by-laws were so amended as to make the secretary the treasurer of the league, and to require a fine of $10 on any club that fails to pay to the league's sinking fund within one week after a name is played. Another change made was the holding of the annual meeting in October instead of November, and in a city to be designated by the president.

A forfeit of $500 in cash, half of the salary limit, was decided upon, this amount to be posted with the president of the league by February 1 as an evidence of the good faith of the clubs, and also to insure the league against loss in case one of the clubs drops out of the circuit during the playing season. Those attending the meeting were J. L. Elliott, Roanoke; Dr. J. R. McCay, Norfolk; William Hanan and D. F. Lawrence, Portsmouth; R. T. Wilson and Denny Perkins, Petersburg; W. B
